

Published since 1982 Waterlines is a peer reviewed journal providing a forum for all those involved in extending water supply, sanitation, hygiene, waste management, and related issues in developing regions, to come together and debate key issues. Successfully bridging the gap between policy and research, Waterlines benefits from active readers and authors in the policy, practice, and academic environments, promoting affordable, sustainable solutions.

The editors particularly welcome contributions which consider the key challenges facing the water and sanitation sector (engineers, health professionals, community development workers, researchers, policy makers) and suggest how these issues may be tackled using affordable, sustainable systems with reference to wider policy and institutional frameworks.

Published: January, April, July, October

ISSN: 1756-3488 (online) 0262-8104 (print)

Co-Editors

Richard C. Carter – Independent consultant, UK
Paul Hutchings – Cranfield University, UK

Editorial Advisory Board

Andy Bastable – Oxfam, UK
Dani Barrington – University of Leeds, UK
Ned Breslin – Wounded Warrior Project, USA
Clarissa Brocklehurst – Independent consultant, Canada
Joe Brown – Georgia Institute of Technology, USA
Sue Cavill – independent consultant, UK
Katrina Charles – Oxford University, UK
Frances Cleaver – University of Sheffield, UK
Oliver Cumming – London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, UK
Kerstin Danert – SKAT, Switzerland
Caetano Dorea – Université Laval, Canada
Robert Dreibelbis – London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, UK
Barbara Evans – University of Leeds, UK
Julie Fisher – WEDC, UK
Samuel Godfrey – UNICEF, Ethiopia
Guy Howard – DFID, UK
Andrés Hueso – WaterAid, UK
Alejandro Jimenez – Stockholm International Water Institute, Sweden
Rick Johnston – WHO, Geneva, Switzerland
Oliver Jones – Water & Sanitation Program, World Bank
Stephen Jones – Department for International Development, UK
Daniele Lantagne – Tufts University, USA
Patrick Moriarty – IRC, Netherlands
Guy Norman – WSUP, UK
Jonathan Parkinson – Oxfam GB, UK
Eduardo Perez – Emory University, USA
Jan Willem Rosenboom, – Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation, USA
Darren Saywell, Plan International, USA
Marielle Snel – IRC, Netherlands
Sally Sutton – Freelance consultant, UK
Michael Templeton – Imperial College London, UK
Belen Torondel – London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, UK
Sanjay Wijesekera – UNICEF, USA

Articles should be original contributions, between 4-6000 words in length, formatted to house style and not under consideration elsewhere. Alongside regular issues Waterlines also produces special guest edited thematic issues. If you would be interested in submitting to a special issue or would like to submit a proposal further information can be found on the journal homepage

www.practicalactionpublishing.org/waterlines

Full instructions for authors, including House Style guide can be found online at www.practicalactionpublishing.org/journal-authors

All articles should be submitted via Waterlines online submission and peer review system

www.edmgr.com/waterlines

Waterlines participates in the Practical Action Publishing open access programme, Open Online. Once accepted, authors can choose to publish open access in order to comply with funder mandates.

www.practicalactionpublishing.org/open-online

Articles published in Waterlines are also eligible for Online Preview, allowing your article to be viewed online ahead of the print issue.

Get the latest research delivered to your inbox
www.developmentbookshelf.com

Recommend to your librarian
www.practicalactionpublishing.org/waterlines

Editorial contact waterlines@practicalaction.org.uk

Subscriptions contact publishinginfo@practicalaction.org.uk